Hello Amanda and Ed:

I have no idea how to set up a detailed quote for her (unreasonable at best). Each crosswalk will cost $450 to grind off. If they want it broke down 70% ($315) labor and 30% ($135) materials I guess that is one way to approach it but I want $450 per crosswalk removal. This Kellie is something else. Please tell what to do? By the way I am sure each crosswalk is different so the estimate is only a guess.

Dann.

The crosswalks are an owner requested EXTRA which I still need a DETAILED quote for.

Yes someone will be there.

Number of trips could be one unless you want to split it into two to use a rain day to work your crew. That is up to you.

We will markup the list stating what is extra and what is your punchlist items shortly and send it over.

I am also confused with what was said in the e-mail. The punch list items which I believe all but one item was due to other contractors or cars and equipment that was not moved when our crew was there. I guess I need to know how many trips the punch list will take. I planned on only making one trip to do the punch list items. So the e-mail is making me quite nervous. I would like to know when the areas will be cleared for us to do the work. Also someone from your company will be there to make sure we get all the items done exactly the way you want it done so there is no coming back, please. I am also planning to be there to make sure the work is complete. Let me know where we stand.
